

The short version

Google already knows where you are. Your website just doesn't tell it what you are. Your map listing shows up when people look for learning programs for older adults in Seattle, but it doesn't appear to be managed by anyone at LLC, and the website behind it gives Google very little to work with: pages named "HOME" and "ABOUT", no page descriptions, and test pages sitting next to your real classes.

None of this needs a new website. It needs a proper setup, and the three changes on this page do most of the work.

pages your site lists for Google (16 main, 38 classes, 54 events)

0 of 16

main pages have a description, so Google writes its own

53 of 54

event pages are for events that have already happened

Google reviews, on a listing that shows "Own this business?"

The three things we'd fix first

1 Claim and complete your Google Business Profile

Why: it's where you already show up. Right now it offers "Own this business?" to anyone who searches your name, uses a Street View photo of the building, has 6 reviews, and links to the old <http://> version of your site.

Fix: claim it, add photos of real classes, term hours, a description and the right categories, and ask students for a review at the end of each term.

About an hour to claim. Google's verification can take a few days.

2 Give every page a proper name and description

Why: your homepage's title in Google is "HOME | Lifetime Learning", none of the 16 main pages has a description, and the homepage never says in a heading that you run low-cost classes for older adults in Northeast Seattle. Google has to guess.

Fix: write titles, descriptions and one main heading for the 16 main pages. Wix lets you set one naming template for all class pages and one for all event pages, so the other 92 pages are fixed through two settings.

A day of careful work, done once.

3 Clear out what Google shouldn't be looking at

Why: alongside your real classes, Google is handed an unedited Wix template page ("I'm a title. Click here to edit me."), a test event located in St. Catharines, Ontario, a placeholder event called "Event", two cancelled classes, 53 past events and two copies of your About page.

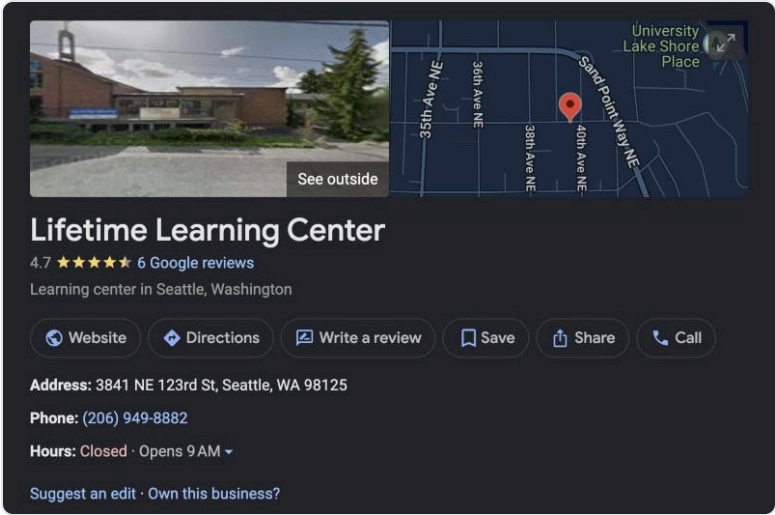

Fix: remove or hide them, agree a simple rule for past events and cancelled classes each term, and connect Google Search Console so you can see exactly which pages Google keeps.

Half a day, then ten minutes each term.

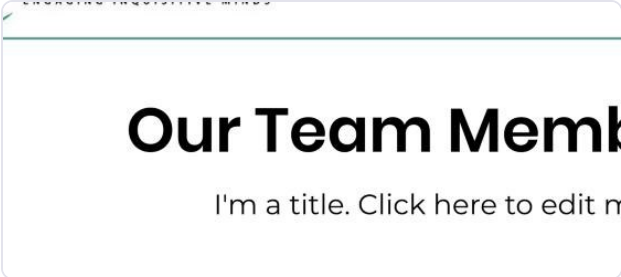

What's already working

- The site is light and loads quickly, and the mobile version is easy to read at a comfortable text size.
- You appear in Google's map results for "lifelong learning for older adults seattle" (second when we checked).
- Close to 40 written class descriptions each term: the kind of real, specific content Google rewards.
- Prices are stated plainly ($20 registration, $40 per class), which answers the first question most visitors have.

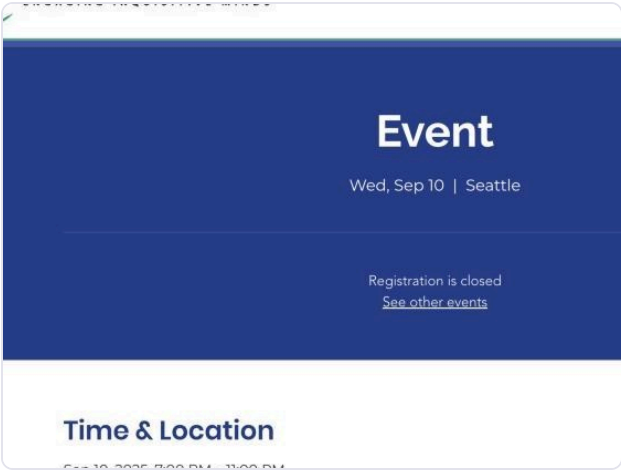

What we saw

Searching "lifetime learning center seattle": the listing offers "Own this business?", shows a Street View photo and 6 reviews. In our check, the first regular results under it were an obituary and a boat club, not your website.

/team, listed for Google: the Wix template text was never replaced.

/events-1/event, a placeholder with "event description", still published.

Everything we found

FINDING	WHY IT MATTERS	PRIORITY
YOUR GOOGLE LISTING
Business profile appears unclaimed	Anyone can suggest edits to your hours, phone or address, and you can't reply to reviews or add photos.	High
Listing links to http://, not https://	An extra redirect on every click, and a sign the listing hasn't been touched in a while.	Medium
6 reviews	Reviews are one of the main things that move you up the map results. Seattle Central's continuing education listing has 13.	Medium
PAGE NAMES AND DESCRIPTIONS
Titles like "HOME", "ABOUT", "CLASSES"	The title is the blue link people click in Google. "HOME" tells a searcher nothing about who you are.	High
No description on any main page	Google fills the gap with whatever text it finds, often the wrong sentence.	High

FINDING	WHY IT MATTERS	PRIORITY
No main heading on the homepage or 12 other main pages	The main heading is how Google confirms what a page is about.	Medium
Class page titles don't say what or where	"Watercolor Basics S1" could be anywhere. "Watercolor classes for seniors in NE Seattle" can be found.	Medium
Site name set to "Lifetime Learning"	Google may show the shorter name instead of "Lifetime Learning Center", which is how people search for you.	Low
Truncated title: "Intermediate Spanish Conversation Prac"	Hidden characters in the class name cut it short in Google.	Low
PAGES GOOGLE SHOULDN'T SEE
Template page at /team	An unfinished page tells Google, and anyone who lands there, that the site isn't looked after.	High
Test and placeholder events	One is marked as taking place in Ontario, Canada, which muddies where Google thinks you are.	High
53 past events and 2 cancelled classes still live	Old pages compete with current ones, and a senior who lands on a cancelled class may not look further.	Medium
About and Mission & Vision are identical	Two copies of the same page split what Google credits to either.	Medium
Google still lists an old address (/copy-of-about)	A sign Google hasn't revisited the site recently. Search Console and a fresh sitemap fix that.	Medium
CONTENT GOOGLE CAN'T READ
The class schedule sits inside an embedded table from another website	Google and screen readers treat it as separate from your page, so your most useful page reads as nearly empty.	High
Image descriptions are file names ("Cercile and students_edited.jpg")	Screen readers read them aloud, and Google can't tell what the photos show.	Medium
No sharing image or description	Links shared by email, Facebook or Nextdoor show up blank, which is how many of your students pass things on.	Medium
Default Wix icon in the browser tab	Google shows this icon next to your result instead of your logo.	Low
TRUST AND DETAILS
"Contact" in the menu goes to the homepage	There's no page with hours, directions, parking and accessibility, which is what a first-time visitor needs before coming in.	Medium
Your Tax ID and "2020-2024" are phone links on the Support page	Tapping them on a phone tries to dial them. A small thing donors notice.	Low
Class Descriptions says the term ends "Friday November 19th"	19 November is a Thursday, and the Register page says so.	Low
Business details describe you as a generic "local business"	Marking you as a nonprofit educational organization helps Google, and AI assistants, describe you correctly.	Low

What happens next

Everything in this report can be done inside your existing Wix site, and you're welcome to work through it yourselves. The three fixes on page one are the place to start. If you'd rather hand it off, this is what we'd do.

SEO SETUP, DONE FOR YOU

$950 one-time, nonprofit rate · about two weeks

- Claim and complete your Google Business Profile
- Titles, descriptions and headings for the 16 main pages
- Naming templates for every class and event page
- Test, template, duplicate and cancelled pages cleaned up
- The class schedule rebuilt as real text on the page
- A Visit us page with hours, directions and parking
- Sharing image, icon and image descriptions
- Nonprofit details marked up for Google and AI assistants
- Google Search Console connected and sitemap submitted
- A check-in 30 days later on what Google has picked up

Finished before winter term registration opens. You keep full control of the site, and we're happy to work alongside your current developer.

A note on the searches in this report: Google shows different results depending on location and device, so they reflect what we saw on 30 September 2026. Search Console is the reliable view of what Google has and what people type to find you, which is why connecting it is part of the setup. If it's already set up, access to it would sharpen everything above.
